

ABSTRACT

A set of dice and method for selecting between options relating to consumables such as food and drinks includes dice having information relating to the options printed thereon. For example, the set of dice may include first and second dice with the first dice featuring the type of cuisine and the second dice featuring the type of dining, restaurant type, restaurant location or restaurant name. Alternatively, the set of dice may include a first dice with types of drinks printed thereon and a second dice with types of bars printed thereon. The set of dice could also feature a first dice featuring bar or restaurant types printed and a second dice featuring bar or restaurant locations. The dice may also be used for advertising specific restaurants or bars and may be presented to obtain a discount at an establishment.